STATE CAMPAIGN FORMALLY OPENED.

Attendance at the Meeting of Illinois Republicans Was Disappointingly Small.

free train from Springfield and way points. The forencen trains on the Wabash carried no extra coaches, and in the afternoon the only delegation to arrive was one of thirtyfour Sangamen County Republicans, who voted for Yates, Sr., in 1800.

Scott County contributed only thirty-two and the Morgan County pioneers who voted for Yates forty years ago, numbered thirtysix, Lieutenant Governor Nerthcott wanted to make a splurge and announced that he brought up 200. I was told his crowd com-fortably filled two coaches actually less than one hundred. An even 100 came from Coek County, when 500 were promised headed by a band. The band canceled its date, but there was plenty of music. There wasn't many more marchers in the processtop than there were musicians, brass bands and martial bands, and drum corps and Sugle corps. They crowded people off the sidewalks and filled the hotels and Music Instead of Argument.

It augured the kind of a campaign the Republicans of lilinois propose to run this year. They will give the people all the music they want, and not talk any more than necessity demands. Two gies clubs came down from Chicago, and each tried to cut rell the other. It was a contest of lungs, and melody had no standing. The Cook County Republican contribution was a studed baby elephant and a company of soldiers, uniformed in white and blue. This was emphasizing the general trend of Republicanism toward militarism. The bands and gies clubs had the right-of-way and received more applicage than the orators. Time wasn't precious, and the vocal artists answered every recall. The worst of fi was, the audience seemed to prefer the music to the oratory. But then the speeches were not intended to accomplish any good. They were of the jolly variety, and the first repeaker, which was Yates, forgot he gave a speech to the press, and struck out on an eccentric line. More than once the tears of sensibility, or something else, arose to the eyes of the young candidate. Panegyrle on Banecy.

Particularly was this true during the panegyric on Judge Hanecy. Quite an affection was displayed between Yates and Hanecy. They seemed to have formed a mutual admiration society. The crowd quickly caught the spirit of the thing, and when Hanecy was presented, Yates rushed to the front of the stand and dramatically waved the people to their feet and asked for three cheers for the Judge. The response was enthusiastic and hearty. It wesn't necessary to tell that audience that Yates owed his nomination to Judge Hanecy, and I expect John Tanner would have received as cordial a reception. All the Republicans in the Sixteenth and Seventeenth Congressional districts ought to have turned out to-day.

Lock at this list of eminent officeholders, present and prespective: Lock at this list of eminent officeholders, present and prospective:
Richard Yates, Internal Revenue Collector; Charles G. Dawes, Comptroller of the Currency; Congressman Waiter Reeves, Judges Elbridge, Hansey, Orrin and Carier, Secretary of State Ross, Auditor McCullough, Lieutenant Governor Northeott, H. J. Hamilin, M. O. Williamson, Daniel Hogas, David Shanahan, Sheriff Magerstadt of Cook County, Rallroad and Warehouse Commissioners Edwell and Cannells, former Speaker Ed Curtis, Len Smail, Fresident of the Kankakee Hospital Board and candidats for the State Senate. There was a host of lesser lights, deuces, trays and fours.

Crowd a Disappointment.

So I say the crowd was a disappointment, considering the elaborate acrobats and animal trainers present to do stants. The torencon parade was spoiled by the rain, which came up in a brisk shower when the sead of the procession appeared at the old quare. It was a creditable showing, nevertheless, and was made up of 1,157 persons of all ages and conditions, mostly costumed a soldier fashion.

on an ages and conditions, mostly costumed in soldier fashion.

The feature that most impressed the visitor was the studied effort to ape the military. It was evident on all sides. The rank and file Republicans are being educated to embrace militarism direct from the farm and workshop. They are being worked into it by degrees. The chief marshal was Charles Henry, and as he galioped back and forth, his big yellow sash flying in the breeze, I wondered if he had forgotten the election of 1894, when the A. P. A. organization elected Yates County Judge and every Regulblean on the county these except Charles Henry, the candidate for Sheriff, who was defeated by about the mame majority as the Democrats.

The Republican Committee and A. P. A. organization that year demanded and ceived $1,500 of Mr. Henry's good money, and he sustained a crushing defeat. There was a good audience in the tent in the afternoon. The space was filled and a fringe of men and boys stood on the edge forming a dark border. It was a Yates crowd, no mistaking the fact, and it was familiar with the candidate, and he encouraged the familiarity. I thought there might have been something approaching an ovation when he began or at some points in Yate's remarks, inasmuch as ne seemed desirous of showing the statesman whom he defeated that he was near the hearts of his people. The friendly interchanges between Yates and the audience were confined to less than a score in the audience, but they made the most of their opportunities. It didn't have the hearty spontaneity that comes from the hearts of 2,000 people. That was the size of the crowd that faced Mr. Yates this afternoon.

The price of WONDER-WORKERS is Daly Om Dellar per bes, elways cash with the order, by

EFFORT TO APE THE MILITARY.

The crowd that faced Mr. Yates this afternoon.

Not an Ovation.

When the candidate appeared there was a demonstration insting half a minute. Fings were waved and there was a lot of applause and cheers. Fostmaster Kreider tried to induce a continuation of the demonstration—tried to make it an ovation, but the audience would not respond.

Chairman Robertson of the County Committee, a Tanner lieutenant, and treasurer of the Insane Hospital here, presented the Chadwlek quartet from the Circuit Clerk's office in Chicago, and their first song was the keynote of the Republican campaign this year. "Glory tells the story," they same. "In freedom's name we've won great fame" was another refrain, which became a memory after philadelphia. Then Mr. Robertson advanced to the front, and, running his fingers through his long half, he opened the programme this way: "Ladles and Gentlemen: After our afternoon performance," and he got no further, for the audience laughed and applauded. The statesmen on the stand didn't appear to rejoy it, but they smirked and winked at each other as though it was a good joke.

Robertson announced that there would be speaking at right, after the parace, and the introduced A. L. French as ringmaster of the show, Mr. French at once gave way to the county for the introduced A. Mr. French at once gave way to Yates and Northcott and Rose and Kreider and young Oglesby and half a dozen others on the stand made another desperate attempt to give Yates an ovation. It was creditable, and that is all that can be said with candor.

Lincoln Mentioned Once.

It was a notable omission on the part of the oretors that the name of Lincoln was mentioned only once and "the spirit of our forefathers" was forgotten entirely. The Revolution, the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution were shamefully neglected by every orator. Mr. Yates paid a glowing tribute to the men who made the Republican party, and named them in bunches, and Lincoln's name was included in the list. That was the only reference to the great first President of the Republican party. He paid some attention to the inboring man-more than to any other one subject, if I except the fing. The fing is bathed in blood and washed several times in every one of Mr. Yates's orations. His reference to the trusts was particularly happy, enlightening and consoling.

"I point with pride," he said, "to the administration of State affairs for the inst four years."

He said that Fifer used $6,000.000 during his administration, and Altgeld used $19,000.000, but he did not say a Republican Legislature forced half a dozen expensive institutions on Altgeld during his last two years.

Republican Expenditures. Lincoln Mentioned Once.

Republican Expenditures. Republican Expenditures.

Nor did he give the money approprieted for Tanner's administration, which foots up the enormous total of $23,000,000. He made no other reference to State matters. Charles G. Dawes appropriately defended McKinley, as follows: "What our soldiers in the Philippines are fighting for to-day, our party is fighting for," was Mr. Dawes's text.

party is fighting for," was Mr. Dawes's text.

Judge Hanecy, Congressman Reeves and Judge Carter were trotted out in turn to tell the people how giad they were young Mr. Yates was nominated instead of themselves, Judge Hanecy was especially fulsome and flattering in his remarks, and, with the aid of Mr. Yates, the Chicagoan received the heartiest demonstration of any of the speakers, not excepting Yates, Following these were Northeout, Rose, McCullough, Hamilin and Williamson. Every one was placed on exhibition for a brief time.

To-night there was a parade of clubs from Springfield and Bloomington. Free trains brought the most bolsterous and largest delegations. There was some brief speechmaking in the opera-house and tent. The parade was large and creditable.

Passing of a Landmark.

Ground was broken this week for the erection of a row of modern buildings at the northwest corner of Russell and Mc-Nair avenues, being in the center of the old South Side Park. This tract was recently divided by the Ahlen heirs, and was the scene of the year's largest auction, which was successfully conducted by the Mercantile Trust Company earlier in the reason. The buildings above referred to will be the first erected in the tract, and begin the transformation of a pleasure resort into a residence district. They are being erected by John D. Niemeler for an investment. They will be modern in all respects and will cost about $29,000. Passing of a Landmark.

AGENTS' REPORTS.

Mercantile Trust Company.

Mercantile Trust Company.

The Mercantile Trust Company reports having closed a five-year lease on the large warehouse or factory building of the Walter A. Wood Mowing and Reaping Machine Company, located at the northeast corner of Twenty-first and Randolph streets, the lease being the St. Louis Paper Box Company, of which O. H. Visths is president. The building is a massive five-story brick, erected on a lot 100 feet square. Being located in the ratiread district, it possesses unusually good shipping facilities, it will be remembered that a sale of this property was recently reported, but could not at that time be closed, owing to a technical condition, temporary in astare, in connection with the machine company's bond issue. A lease was therefore desirable for a period which would overcome the condition referred to. The Mercantile Trust Company in a short time succeeded in locating a tenant and closing the lesse on terms satisfactory to all parties at interest. The paper box company is making alterations to adapt the building to the requirements of its business and will take possession at an enriv date.
